

The Interdisciplinary Journal of Populism is an annual international, peer-reviewed, and open-access journal on the study of populism and its manifestations. The journal is of relevance to the work of academics, practitioners, policymakers, and civil society. The Journal was initially established within the framework of a Jean Monnet Module entitled 'European Union Law and Governance in Populist Times' that run at the University of Central Lancashire Cyprus between 2019-2022. The Journal continues its operation, being published by the School of Law of the University of Central Lancashire Cyprus.

The journal publishes original research in the form of scientific articles (6,000 – 8,000 words including footnotes), short essays (2,000-3,000 words), and book reviews (1,000-2,000 words including footnotes) on populism and populism-related themes. Papers should not have been published already nor should they be under consideration elsewhere. All submissions must be sent to submissions@lawpop.eu. For more information on the Journal please visit our website. For any further information, please contact us at submissions@lawpop.eu.

Andreas Piperides and Nikandros Ioannidis acted as the Guest Editors for the present issue that investigates 'The Rise and Future of the Populist Radical Right in Europe'. We thank them for their work that presents excellent contributions on a timely and relevant topic.
